Re: UCT's art collection exposed as pale and male after fiery protests

Good day,

Your article titled "UCT's art collection exposed as pale and male after fiery protests" refers.

In this article, it is reported that "This will be made easier by the relaxation of a university regulation requiring all art on campus to have been donated or created by alumni."

We would like to point out that there was never any such regulation, rule or policy.

This statement is not attributed in the article so we have no idea where it is drawn from. Among our concerns is that this statement comes in a paragraph after a quote attributed to the university spokesperson so readers might think that the statement too is official university comment.

We kindly request that a correction be made on both the online and print versions of the article.

Regards,

Elijah Moholola
