Re: UCT rejects financially struggling scholar who obtained an A in 9 subjects

Good day,

Your article titled "UCT rejects financially struggling scholar who obtained an A in 9 subjects" refers.

The text version report on the radio interview does not give any reasons for the student not being accepted.

In the interview, Prof Perez stated that: "The number of points that he actually scored was 756... and the cut off number of points for his category was 865. So you can see the difference is quite big. This means there were eligible people with 865 points who got into his particular category."

This quote should be included in the website story. Otherwise the text version gives an impression that no reason was supplied.

Would you kindly update your story to reflect this fact please.

Regards,

Elijah Moholola
